

European Master of Science in Nuclear Engineering (EMSNE) Award Ceremony

by the European Nuclear Education Network Association

Thursday, 17 September 2015, 14:00 — 15:30

M02 Foyer, M Building, 2nd floor

For the fourth time, the IAEA is hosting the European Master of Science in Nuclear Engineering (EMSNE) Award Ceremony of the European Nuclear Education Network Association (ENEN). Twenty-six laureates will receive the EMSNE Certificates this year. With this event, cooperation in nuclear education, training and research is further enhanced between the IAEA and ENEN.

The objective of the European Master of Science in Nuclear Engineering (EMSNE) programme is to develop an international network of high quality nuclear engineers and scientists by educating students to become analytical, resourceful and inventive nuclear engineers.

ENEN was established in 2003 as a non-profit organization on the basis of the European High Education Area by the partners of the European Nuclear Engineering Network project. It is a major actor in the coordination of nuclear education and training funded by the European Commission. ENEN's objective is to preserve and further develop expertise in the nuclear fields through higher education and training.

A Practical Arrangement was signed between the IAEA and ENEN for research, education and training in nuclear technology. During the past years, the IAEA Member States have benefited from sharing the experience and best practices of ENEN and its accreditation system through shared activities.
